How many morning dailies are now published in London? Most people, journalists included, would answer offhand that there are not more than dozen. Actually the addition of the Westminster Gazette to the list brings the total number up to 30. Lon-don's morning publications are considerably in excess of the evening issues whose number is 12. A few of the constituents of the latter list are also not to be found in the ordinary book

HESSIAN FLY IS NJURIOUS PEST

Farmers Are Urged to Walt for Local Fly-Free Date Before Sowing Any Wheet.

HEAVY INFESTATION IN PAST

Great Deal of Grep Mondiesely Les Last Spring by These Unwilling to Wait Until Danger Line Had Seen Passed.

(Propared by the United States Depart of Agriculture.) Wheat growers are urged by the United States Department of Agriculture to observe their local dy-free date for sowing. In every state where there has been heavy infestation by the Hessian fly in the past the state experiment station and the county agents have taken steps to work out a safe date, after which sowing might be started. It was found last spring that a great deal of wheat was needlessly lost by those who were unwilling to wait until fly emergence was over, or who were not converted to the idea of late sowing.

To combat the Hessian fly pest where it was prevalent last year the county agents used every possible channel for advertising the fly-free date and for urging that it be strictly observed. In no state was the date earlier than September 24, and in many counties planting was not considered safe till after October 1. The department suggests that similar methods for informing farmers of the safe time to plant may be followed this

Active Fly Campaign.

Ohio had an active Hessian fly campaign last fall in 33 counties. Studies were made with emergence cages at the state experimental farm and reports from these were compared with results in local migration boxes. County committees of farmers determined the safe dates for each particular section. Circulars and letters on the subject were distributed as widely as possible. Many county fair exhibits were arranged. In Augistize county one box represented the wheat ap, and was inbeled "Sown too early," and the other showed no wheat because it was "sown after safe date." quently shown as exhibits, also posters giving the life history of the fly. School teachers received copies of Hessian fly literature to use for the agricultural lesson in September.

Advertised "Wild Bjnox." The Hancock county agent had a display that drew the attention of hundreds of persons to the fly menace. He advertised the "Wild Bloox, the most expensive animal in the state of Ohio," and led the crowds to see a Hessian fly under a watch crystal.

Nearby signs described its control. Paid advertising was frequently resorted to Individual cards were mailed to every farmer in Auginize county whose name appeared on the tax list. In Marion county a rubber stamp was made for the county agent's office giving the fly-free date. It was used on every piece of mail that went out. As a result of these various methods of campaigning in Ohio a very small percentage, from two to ten farmers in a county, ignored the fly-free date last fall, so that Similar activities were carried on Kansas, Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, New York and Pennsylvania. In Labette county, Kansas, all infested wheat was plowed under in the spring and farmers were particularly urged to destroy volunteer wheat that had cropped up during the summer. By the Hessian fly pest, however, has been achieved by complete co-operation of all farmers in each section in observing the local fly-free date for sowing wheat.

HANDY TROUGH TO FEED HOGS

Board Nailed on One Side Prevents Animal From Getting More Than His Share.

Feeding hogs in the usual manner often results in spilled feed and many times one bog will get more than its share. A person can, of course, get into the pen and pour the slop directly into the trough, but usually the hogs try to get into the pail and make a mess of things, writes Paul Gorton,

He can now feed them easily and with the board extending the entire length of the trough he can spread the feed the whole length of the trough and so give them all an equal share.

The new picture shows the need for requeening the colony from time to time, the way to prepare the bees for wintering the time to unpack the hives, the control of the swarm, and other details of management. The fact that the bureau of entomology examine samples of combs to identify diseases and advises on their control is brought out.

The film is in one reel, and may be borrowed by extension workers and others entitled to the privilege, or prints may be purchased for approximately the cost of making them, which is about $37.

USE MILLET FOR LATE FEED

Small Area of Land May Se Pre-pared and Sown at Little Cost-Stock Thrive on It.

Many farmers find a late patch of millet helps out in feeding. A small area of land, provided it has not been left and lost to weeds, may be prepared and sown at a small cost in need and labor, and considerable feed produced in ordinary seasons. German millet makes good feed when properly cured. Horses, mules and cattle like it, and thrive on it.
